The World

The world is a wonderful place I call home
The World is a beautiful, soft spoken poem
The World is a flower that must be fed
The World is a book that isn't finished being read
The World is a mystery that goes on and on
The World is grass that's growing bigger on the lawn
The World is a tree from little seeds
The World is bracelet made entirely out of beads
The World has many colors dark and light
The World is full of people not meant to fight
The World is a path with obstacles in the way
The World is a bad and a good day
The World is a ball without enough air
The World is a place that really needs care
The World is a story that needs an end
The World is many colors all in a blend
The World is many snowflakes all different, not the same
The World is an athlete that should get all the fame
The World is a door people coming and going
The World is a place that helps children keep growing
The World has many people the big and the small
The World has many places, the gym and the mall
The World is a mountain with stones in the way
The world is admired day by day
The world is a room filled with laughter and tears
The World is a room filled with calmness and fears
The World is a tree growing big and strong
The World is love which lasts very long
The world is a wonderful place I call home
